Pensacola Report

The Christians in Pensacola were in hiding. One would have thought that the government was hunting them down. It was February 21, the opening day of the trial. Having bowed to a Supreme Court edict of 1973 which denied the states their right to prosecute abortionists, the state of Florida was prosecuting a citizen for doing what it formerly did — protect the innocent from death, by force, as necessary. Yes, Florida prosecutor James Murray was trying a citizen for defending twelve preborn babies with lethal force.

I was reminded of my walks through East Berlin and Czechoslovakia over two decades ago. One could not walk through town without feeling watched. One resident who lives near the courthouse said there was an uncommon "tension" on the street according to the local Pensacola Journal.

Indeed, as I walked toward the courthouse passing out Fully Informed Jury Association leaflets, I was fearful. People walked by coldly, refusing to take the information. Another supporter of Michael Griffin was near me with a camera, one Jacob Miller. And we were being watched.

Standing across the corner from the courthouse, I looked at the roof and saw a man with binoculars looking down at us. I mentioned the fact to my associate, who then waved to the one with the spy-glasses. Moments later a car stopped in front of us and Mr. Miller offered a leaflet to the two passengers. Both exited the car and approached Mr. Miller in black uniforms. He took their pictures. As they proceeded to arrest him, they were joined by four other SWAT personnel. I took a few pictures and then was told to take no more. "O.K."

And, Oh well. I paced up and down the street opposite the courthouse. Paul Hill was on the other side on the sidewalk in front of the courthouse with a huge sign declaring Griffin's action to be justifiable. I joined him and was soon approached by some of the same SWAT men. They wanted my picture and ID. I complied, doubting whether it was the right thing to do. They then turned to Philip Mullens, a local anti-abortionist Episcopalian, and took his picture and ID as well.

There were only a few other prolife protestors at the courthouse when the trial (jury selection) began. There was the itinerant Prolife Anderson from Reno, Nevada — the "Human Pro-Life 'Poster' in God's Hand" according to the Reno Gazette (August 24, 1990), who legally changed his name to "Prolife Anderson" in 1987. There was also a local couple which did not explicitly support Griffin, but desired to confirm their opposition to the abortionist.

At noon Fr. David Trosch joined Paul and me for a press conference. The priest from Mobile was under discipline for speaking the truth after having been enjoined by his superior to keep silent. Fr. Trosch spoke without timidity, loving the truth of God and obedience to His word more than the word of his bishop.

The next day Cathy Ramey, Paul Hill, and I were in front of the courthouse, joined by Prolife Anderson and three young local boys with signs. After Cathy picked up a jury questionnaire from the courthouse, she stood with us on the corner and held a sign. A policeman accompanied by someone he called "judge" politely ID'ed Cathy. Later that day her press privileges as a reporter for Life Advocate magazine were revoked because she had "participated in a protest."

On the next day (February 23) Andrew Cabot of New Hampshire was outside the courthouse taking pictures. After pointing the camera at the top of the roof, he was descended upon by several SWAT men, arrested, taken to the station, IDed, and released. He was interviewed by local television and took the opportunity to decry the jury questionnaire (see Dr. Mike Colvin's "The Jury System," p. 3).

Miller was released about one week after his arrest and returned to the courthouse, joining the small group which continued to maintain a witness in defense of Griffin. He had accompanied Cabot in a car, but remained in the car out of fear of re-arrest. From inside the car he took pictures while Cabot joined others at the courthouse.

Suddenly SWAT men descended upon Miller, pulled him out of the car, frisked him, took the keys out of the ignition, opened the trunk of the car with the keys, and searched the trunk. Cabot, upon seeing the siege, headed toward the car. A police car drove in front of him, smashing into the metal barricade surrounding the courthouse. The officer forbade Cabot from approaching the car as the search was conducted.

Pearl Jam

A popular rock and roll group was recruited by Eleanor Smeal to perform a "Rock for Choice" concert in Pensacola on March 9, the eve of the anniversary of Gunn's termination. Numerous foolish Christian children supported the concert with their money, caring nothing for the fact that it would enrich the efforts of the 'borts.

A well-meaning but foolish youth pastor of a local church organized "Positive Life Rally," a counter concert. David Hutchinson of Pinewoods Presbyterian Church said, "This is as much a response to extreme profilers like Paul Hill as it is to Pearl Jam... I believe as Christians we are commanded to live lives like Jesus and Jesus would not advocate killing people because he disagreed with their life-style." If Pastor Hutchinson believes the death of Dr. Gunn was the result of a "life-style disagreement," he hasn't been paying attention.

Regina Dinwiddle

Came from Kansas to be present during the gathering of abortionists in Pensacola for a convention on the weekend. She was arrested on that Saturday (March 12) for an old warrant in St. Petersburg in connection with an abortuary blockade in 1989. She was released on St. Patrick's day. Time served.

Paul Hill

Was visited on March 14 by two federal agents at the dealership where he was working. He was questioned about the recent arrest of one Daniel Ware in Texas on some kind of firearms charge. It is typical of federal investigators to harass in this way, showing up at the work place to embarrass employees before their employers. Persons under investigation are threatened with the loss of their jobs. Employers don't like having workers who are pursued by federal agents.

The federal government has been busy conspiring to prosecute Christians under RICO legislation. Grand juries have been in session. Life Advocate editors have been subpoenaed and interrogated, allegedly in connection with the Shelley Shannon case. But questioning indicates government efforts to prosecute anti-abortion Christian activists under various RICO statutes. In particular, the government is in pursuit of that minority of anti-abortionists who have spoken in defense of forceful defenders of the innocent. (ACLJ, Rutherford Institute, and Free Speech Advocates are you listening?)

The Janet Waco Reno Syndrome

The arrests in Pensacola have a common thread. All are Christians showing public support of the man who aborted an abortionist. Illegal arrests, searches, and extraordinary measures taken to apprehend anti-abortion misdemeanants are all actions which reflect the intolerant anti-Christian spirit of the Clintonista regime. It is not just blockades they don't want. They don't want speech. Speech which declares that murderers/abortionists may rightfully be stopped with lethal force is intolerable.

Daniel Ware

The feds are abuzz investigating a man who allegedly wanted to prevent the feds from doing to anti-abortion Christian activists in Pensacola "what they did in Waco" (Houston Chronicle, March 13). Daniel Ware was arrested in Houston after returning from Pensacola on March 11. He had traveled there two weeks ago with several firearms in his baggage. Apparently, with the Waco Holocaust impressed deeply in his mind, he feared for the safety of the small band of fellow Christian activists in Pensacola. (Unreasonable? Maybe he is seeing a little further into the future.)

The poor fellow seems to have meant well. But he obviously lacked the arms necessary to resist the federal government. Mr. Ware had blocked abortuaries with the Lambs and associated himself with the activists of Rescue America. Crazy in the eyes of 'borts, of course. And even some pro-your-own-lifers would regard such self-sacrifice as evidence of an intellectual shortage. But we wouldn't want to judge the man's intentions.

Mr. Ware's concern for protection against federal tyranny should raise important questions for honest pundits. If the feds did murder innocent people in Waco (if they had malevolent intent to abuse law-abiding arms-bearers), would it have been right to resist them with arms had such intentions of the feds been known?

The jurors in Texas apparently thought so, and we think such musings are in order. Ware's intentions may well have been good ones. If the federal government were to storm the Burt residence as it did the Davidian residence, it would have been right to defend the Burts with arms. It is a basic principle of the U.S. Constitution. Government was never to be trusted absolutely. The purpose of the Second Amendment was not to allow the citizenry to possess arms against neighborhood hoodlums. Such goes without saying. The citizen's right to bear arms has to do with protection against a rogue government!

To paraphrase the Founding Fathers, How shall we have a revolution against tyrants if we cannot bear arms? As the motto of the State of Virginia declares: sic semper tyrannis ("thus ever to tyrants"). Just as it is good for a wayward people to have a healthy respect for civil authorities, it is also good for those in power — well inclined to abuse it, as humans are wont to do — to have a healthy respect for the power of the citizenry to revolt.

Dan Ware, according to the Chronicle, lives in his cab, where he was arrested by ATF agents. He has been a long time local activist. Officials with Planned Parenthood of Houston said "Ware had been a virtual fixture outside their family planning clinic at 3601 Fannin." The agents searched the home of 74-year-old Marie Antoinette Kehlhof where Ware spends part of his time. She said, "They came in with agents and the bomb squad and they told me to stay outside because it might be dangerous. I said to

The Jury System

A Grand Institution Now in Decay

by Mike Colvin

A troubling document has fallen into the hands of the editors of CACN — the jury questionnaire used by the Pensacola court in the trial of Michael Griffin. The document is troubling not because of any peculiarity that the state of Florida has devised, but rather because it is typical of such questionnaires used in every state. The process of choosing jury members has become an "art" or "skill" for lawyers to manipulate, and it seems almost inevitable that, after all is said and done, it is justice that suffers.

Three different parties have an interest in jury selection: the court, the prosecution and the defense. Presumably the court itself (which means the judge, in practice) has an interest in selecting jurors who are competent in a general sense, which may explain why questions 66 and 67 are included: "Do you have any health or personal problems that affect your ability to serve on this jury?" "Do you have any moral, ethical, religious, emotional, philosophical or other belief that makes you unable to sit in legal judgment?" In addition, both the judge and the prosecutor are interested in weeding out people who have any disqualifying prejudice, e.g. a prejudice against imposing the death penalty. The questionnaire has several questions concerning a prospective juror's attitude toward the death penalty. Presumably the prosecution would object to a juror who believes that the death penalty is always immoral, and the defense would object to a juror who believes that jaywalkers should be electrocuted.

These types of questions are not very controversial, but they represent a small minority of the questions being asked. A second category of questions seems to spring from the lawyers' desire to play "mind reader." What they more likely represent is simple stereotyping at work. For example, what is the point of asking what a prospective juror's job is (Question 4b), the highest grade completed in school (Question 6), the favorite television program (Question 52), favorite radio station (Question 55), or favorite famous person, "living or dead" (Question 57)? After you have finished laughing at this stupidity, you quickly realize that the only possible answer is that the lawyers "interpreting" the questionnaire believe that they can learn something significant about how a juror thinks from knowing whether he is blue collar or white collar, dropout or Ph.D., fan of "Roseanne" or of "Leave It to Beaver." This is a perfect example of stereotyping, i.e. assuming that people who share a few external characteristics will also think identically.

There is a third category of question that is perhaps the most troubling (but bear in mind that none of these questions are peculiar to the state of Florida or to abortion-related cases). Ponder questions like the following: "Have you ever signed a petition on any public issue?" (Question 16) "Have you, any family member or close friend ever run for election to public or political office?" (Question 13) "In what activities are you involved for your church, temple or religious organization?" (Question 18) "Have you ever had a bumper sticker on your car? If yes, what did the bumper sticker say?" (Question 61) "Have you ever studied or done extensive reading about psychiatry, psychology, sociology, or related subjects?" (Question 63) If you think that giving a positive answer to any of these questions will increase your chances of being chosen as a juror, go to the back of the class and put on your dunce cap. It seems almost painfully obvious that the court, the prosecution and the defense are all united in thinking that the best juror is an inoffensive nitwit who has no strong opinions about anything, someone pliable whom they can easily sway with their courtroom theatrics. It is a sad commentary on our society when the very persons whom we would ordinarily regard as the best citizens — those who sign petitions, who run for office, who are involved in church activities, who put bumper stickers on their bumpers, who read and keep themselves informed — are regarded as the least desirable for making some of the most critical and necessary decisions of all.

Those who are familiar with courtroom procedures will recognize that it is not possible, without being present, to know exactly how the prosecution and the defense will use the material from the questionnaire. Both sides will have access to all the jurors' answers, and both sides will be allowed a certain number of "peremptory strikes," i.e. the judge will allow them to remove a prospective juror without giving any explanation. There is nothing inherently objectionable in this procedure, so long as the peremptory strikes are limited. Eventually, the lawyers will use up their vetos and will have to start accepting jurors.

The aspect of the questionnaire that is unknown but potentially most troubling is how the court itself will interpret some of the information. Prospective jurors may be dismissed for "cause" also, but what will the judge consider "cause"? Will he agree that anyone who has signed a petition should be disqualified? Here is where the danger for real abuse arises.

We repeat here our belief that it is good for Christians to sit on juries, with the proper and Biblical goal of punishing the wicked and freeing the righteous. We also remind our reader that we agree in principle with the goals of the "Fully Informed Jury Association," which publicizes the fact that juries have more power than they usually realize; in fact, the power of the American jury is almost limitless, once they retire behind closed doors. Although judges will deny it and grow red in the face when the subject is brought up, jurors have the right under the federal and state constitutions to sit in judgment not just on the facts of a case but on the law itself. Judges want jurors to believe that they must judge only the facts and apply the law as the judge himself explains it to them, but that has never been true and is not true today. Imagine the power of a few righteous people who find themselves on a jury and are confronted with an unjust law! ■ them, 'What is more dangerous, being blown up or having your house bugged?'"

The actual arrest charge was illegal possession of a firearm. (Federal law does not permit a felon to own a firearm.) Ware had been convicted in 1977 of possession of a counterfeit $100 bill, but did not reveal on federal firearms forms that he was a convict. "Why should I? I was told by the U.S. Attorney I would have all my rights after I completed a 5-year probation after my 1977 conviction."

Should such a willingness to protect a fellow citizen from tyrannical deeds of the state be scorned? We do not have all the facts. But if the picture is as we understand it, we advocate the release of Mr. Ware.

■ Blood In The Streets

Hillcrest abortuary in Baltimore suffered a little embarrassment on Saturday, March 12. While a few dozen of the nation's abortionists were gathered in Pensacola to enjoy the fellowship of darkness, blood was literally flowing in the streets following the labors of one of their hard-working comrades. — was too busy slaughtering babies to confer with his fellows in Pensacola on the latest techniques in child dismemberment. But the flushing of baby parts down the drain led to some problems.

Two sidewalk counselors were standing by when the clean-out drain broke open at approximately 11:45 a.m. Blood poured into the parking lot. Customers of the nearby pancake house came out and one of them cried "This is the sin of abortion!" and then called police. Police arrived at noon and made a report. (We're anxious to read it.)

Sharon Thomas, local anti-abortionist on the scene, told the story on the Alan Keyes radio program. She had called various authorities including a state environmental agency. The hack who arrived could only cast doubt on the abortuary being the source. (He had no other suggestions.) Chunks of what appeared to be human flesh was taken by Thomas to a lab for examination.

Strange, but wondrous, how Providence exposes the deeds of darkness. The blood of the innocents, slaughtered in obscurity, is poured into the very streets for citizens to witness as they calmly eat their pancakes.

■ Zoning Out Ministry

D.C. Board of Zoning Appeals denied appeals of Western Presbyterian Church to continue feeding homeless in its Foggy Bottom neighborhood. Reflecting the totalitarian heartlessness of the bigoted Clinton presidency, the board forbade the church from continuing to serve 150 homeless people "because that is not the church's primary function," reported the Washington Times (March 3).

"I think it sends a chilling message to churches," said Rich Fowler, secretary of social concerns for the Catholic Archdiocese of Washington. "It has ramifications for every religious body. I am terrified."

Barbara Kahlow, an executive board member of the Foggy Bottom Association who supported the ruling, said, "It was crucial for the government [because] it has the right to regulate the activity of churches and other organizations."

Western Presbyterian Pastor John Wimberly said he would continue to feed people despite the ruling. We are glad to see our PC Christian brethren ministering to the vagrants and pray that they are able to discern between derelicts and the hard-luck homeless. And we look forward to seeing Wimberly engage in some righteous civil disobedience, but we don't expect it to be too costly for him. No jail, no fines, no RICO, no federal injunctions.

■ WAVA (105.1 FM)

Gilman and Graff (2 to 4 p.m.) have done a commendable job exploring contemporary social and political issues and attempting to address them with biblical ethics.

On March 1 they discussed the ethics of taking lethal action against abortionists in defense of the most defenseless of the innocent. They featured Paul Hill of Defensive Action opposed by a Mr. Joseph Riley, president of Massachusetts Citizens for Life. Riley repeatedly answered the ethical question with voluble indignation concerning the reputation of the "movement" and the "need to change hearts" and the "need to educate and change minds" and the wrongness of "forcing morality upon the whole nation." He decried "radicalism" and "violence" and "vigilante justice" and "murder" and "acts of anger and hatred."

But he never answered the simple two-part question Paul Hill continued to ask: 1) Is it right to use force to defend the life of a child outside the womb? 2) Why isn't it right to use force to defend the child inside the womb?

We commend WAVA for probing these difficult questions.

• Marching For Life With Sodomites

Shall a distinction be made between "prolifers" and "Christian proliferers"? Between champions of "life" and champions of the biblical view of human life?

The homosexuals who support the unborn are helping to sharpen such questions. Pro-Life Alliance of Gays and Lesbians marched against abortion with about a half-dozen folks in '93 and "a few more" in '94 (Washington Times, January 16.)

Janet Parshall, assistant to CWA president Beverly LaHaye said, "We would welcome them with open arms." Wendy Wright, spokeswoman for at-that-time-but-since-replaced-by-Flip-Benham ORN chief, Keith Tucci, was even more confused, saying, "We consider homosexuality a sin, but not a reason for exclusion... We just require that people not be violent."

Strange bedfellows in today's Christian scene.

■ David Crane

Abortionist Olubenga Oredein of

Chesapeake, Va. assaulted David Crane and destroyed a video camera on September 3 as Crane and Don Spitz sat in a car. He regularly commits abortion at Norfolk's Hillcrest abortuary, but is usually not abusive to protestors.

In court the judge found Oredein not guilty of assault, because he judged the abortionist's intentions were not to scratch up Dave Crane's face, but to get the film out of the camera.

Hmm. A few years ago David Crane was sanding inside an abortuary and was blind-sided by an abortionist's assistant. Crane, not the assailant, was charged with assault and convicted. What happened to "intent" (not to mention exchanging the subject with the object of the assault)?

Crane and Don Spitz traveled to Pensacola to support those who came to stand as witnesses against the abortionists who were holding a convention. The National Association of Abortion Providers (or some such name) is headed by Ron Fitzsimmons. The dozen or so abortionists in attendance on March 12 and 13 encountered signs ("Execute Abortionists") carried by the two Virginians and Paul Hill. Fitzsimmons admitted that the execution of abortionists would be right if indeed abortionists were committing murder. (An honesty rare to be found among proliferers these days. There is hope for eternal life for this man!)

■ Five Abortionists — Flashed their bullet-proof vests before dotting Congressmen conducting hearings on FACE (October 18). "I am sick and tired of being terrorized," said Abortionist Frank Snyder of Melbourne. Abortionist Brian Finkel of Phoenix said he didn't like living like a "Ranger in Mogadishu." And circuit-riding Tom Tucker who hops between five abortuaries in Alabama and Mississippi complained about having to hire two bodyguards. (Washington Times, October 19, 1993).

■ Ventura, California — AP reported a partial abortuary torching on the Lord's Day, November, 7. We trust the Lord and His angels found it to be an aromatic appetizer. "Our God is a consuming fire."

■ Rome — Entrance to the abortion chambers in the state-run St. John the Baptist Hospital on February 22 was superglued shut. Abortuary staff apparently afflicted themselves in this fashion to keep the proliferers outside (Rescue America Report, February 21).

■ Owings Mills, Maryland — Planned Barrenhood facility was licked with flames a few days before the celebration of the Lord's birth and again on February 3. The administrators had been doing referrals for nearby abortuaries. "However, in January it was to be announced that they would start committing abortions on site. That announcement has not been forthcoming" (Rescue America Report, February 20).

■ 'Bort Violence in Houston — Uniformed security guard at Planned Barrenhood threatened a local sidewalk counselor and then pulled a gun on him. Policed were called and charges are to be filed against the gunslinger, who had no license to carry the weapon (Rescue America Report, February 21).

■ "Sonya Live" on CNN — Rev. Flip Benham, new ORN head, calls Rev. Paul Hill an "enemy of the cross" for defending the action of Griffin (March 8, 1994, on CNN). Excommunicated Rev. Paul Hill and Rev. Michael Bray declared the termination of childkillers by loving, protective citizens to be an act of mercy.

Sonya slipped the son of the deceased Gunn onto the show contrary to previous arrangements with programmer. (We think such appeals to audience emotion ought to include relatives of women who have been killed by abortionists.) Gunn Jr. successfully pressed Flip to denounce Griffin and Hill. Hill pressed Flip repeatedly to declare the minimum age of the child he would defend by force. Flip could have danced all night. When he finished his number, he said he would defend his own children under attack "with the cross," and that if Hill were about to shoot a baby killer, he would hustle himself in front of the gun and thus save the abortionist by getting himself shot. Junior was happy to hear this.

And so it was, four to two on the issue of defensive force with Eleanor Smeal, Abortionist Bruce Lucero of Birmingham, David Gunn Jr., and Flip Benham joined together in the name of nonviolence, peace, salvation, etc. for born people.

The highlight to of the show occurred provisionally and unknown to us interviewees. A commercial break featured one of those excellent Demoss Foundation messages about the "beautiful choice" that life is. A sonogram of a moving 10-week-old in-utero child was featured on a split screen, shared by a picture of a moving ex-utero infant. This message was shown right after Ms. Smeal had disgorged the usual 'bort rhetoric about the personhoodlessness of the unborn person, calling him a piece of

"phlegm."

Lies, of course, are the foundation of legalized childslaughter. And lies are necessary to sustain the institution. But those who continue to believe lies when the truth is put before them bear a guilt of their own. By the grace of God, truth was spoken even on CNN.

Consider the pagan owner, Ted Turner, husband of Hanoi Jane Fonda. Both are in love with Planned Barrenhood, the wacko environmental maniac Union of Concerned Scientists, and population control. The Turner Broadcasting System has aired the film Abortion For Survival, which as columnist Don Feder says "embraces feticide in the name of planetary salvation."

Turner's abortophilia should come as no surprise. His philosophical starting point is paganism. "Christianity is a religion for losers," he once told the Dallas Morning News. Having rejected Truth, he trusts in lies. He is a common earth worshipper with fine modern clothes. And his Captain Planet series, as Feder says, "is animated earth worship for kids."

And yet, by the grace of the God whom Turner denies, the truth was spoken on CNN. Human beings are more than the dust they come from or the "phlegm" an abortionist grinds them into. They are personal beings,

■ Go to Hell, Harry!

No, we wouldn't say that to President Harry Truman, even though he authorized the killing of thousands of civilians through the bombing of two Japanese cities. It was war-time and extraordinary deeds were required. Supreme Court Justice Harry Blackmun, however, hates God's law. He authorized the deaths of millions of preborn children in his infamous majority opinion in Row v. Wade 21 years ago in peace time.

He continues in his hatred of God's law. In reply to an appeal to the Court to stay an execution scheduled for February 23 in Texas, he wrote in dissent from his fellow justices' decision not to hear the appeal: "From this day forward, I no longer shall tinker with the machinery of death... I feel morally and intellectually obligated simply to concede that the death penalty experiment has failed." He thus became the "only sitting justice to oppose the death penalty in all circumstances" (Washington Times, February 23, 1994).

The February issue has an interesting article on Paul Hill (Defensive Action in Pensacola). Paul is depicted as one whose inflammatory rhetoric about the justification for slaying babykillers (abortionists) contributes to the mental discomfort of "doctors" (abortionists). Poor old "Doc" Bayard Britton — one of the replacements of Abortionist David Gunn — wears a bullet-proof vest. But this dedicated servant of mankind keeps on offering his service. GQ writer Tom Junod attempts to explain away Britton's failure as a physician as the cause of his resort to abortion as a livelihood. According to Junod he was just a maverick who got himself on the bad side of hospital administrators.

In fact, he was an incompetent. And Junod's effort to excuse the documented death of one of Britton's patients is irresponsible reporting at the least. He says "Doc lost one once" and then proceeds to quote the abortionist's account of the incident! Britton explains, "She was sort of a runaway type, living in a crash pad... She had a double uterus, so there were complications..."

Junod wraps up the anecdote with Abortionist Britton (affectionately known as "Doc" by one family) blaming the hospital: "They treated me like a criminal! They took out her uterus, but they didn't treat the girl... If they had treated her shock, she'd still be alive..."

Sunday drew about 100 supporters including family, abortuary employees, abortionists from the convention, and sundry abortophiles. Paul Hill was present with the two Virginians (Father David Trosch had been present for a press conference the previous day. Regina Dinwiddie of Kansas City had been arrested on an old warrant from a previous blockade). Rev. Hill called upon the attendants to "Remember the children Gunn killed." He spoke the word of truth: of judgment, of forgiveness for sins. He warned of the "lake of fire" even as one abortionist — to the apparent discomfort of the others — began to mock the divine warning.

David Crane said of Rev. Hill's preaching: "I was proud of him." Mr. Crane appeared on the evening news with his sign, "Abortion = Clinic Violence," but his words to the reporter were not aired for the public: "I have sympathy for the family's loss of a loved one. But my empathy for the family is similar to that which I would have for the family of Ted Bundy. But even this must be put into perspective. Bundy killed his tens; Gunn killed his ten thousands."

Alabama citizens for life are plagued by Baltimore abortionist, Richard Stuntz. Defend Life picketed Stuntz's home at 5506 South Bend Road to expose the killer to the shame he seems to want to avoid. One who travels way out of town to kill babies may well have a conscience which is not completely seared.

Fliers were circulated with a mug shot of the abortionist. May the grace of God lead this killer to repentance. There are a growing number of converted abortionists awaiting fellowship with him.

■ Sodomy OK, But Not With Children Yet

Last fall Tabatha Darden picked up a two-by-four and broke the leg of a man who was sodomizing his three-year-old in an alley. The 42-year-old man might have been celebrating the recent legalization of Sodomy in D.C. But he was ahead of his time. It is still not legal yet to sodomize children. NAMBLA may hold conventions in town and NOW, the ACLU, and a host of other libertine outfits might support the right to advocate paedophilia, but it just isn't quite in yet.

So when Tabatha swung that club and broke that leg, she got away with it. In fact, she was cheered, just as if she was a heroine. And she was confident she had done right. No shame about it. "He should get 100 years. If he comes back around this way, he belongs to me. I tried to break his skull," she said. "I did what I had to do."

That was the 13th of November. We haven't heard of any charges brought against Ms. Darden.

■ Fairfax County School Board Bigotry Exposed

The board had charged Fairfax Covenant Church a high rate for renting space at West Springfield High School. The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals called it "rent discrimination against religious organizations." The excess, with interest, from 1987 through February 1993 is $287,456.

■ Hillcrest Ex-Utero Death

Last "August 14 at 11 a.m. two ambulances appeared at the abortuary on Pennsylvania Avenue. A motionless body, completely covered by a sheet, was wheeled out of the clinic [abortuary] and into one of the ambulances.

"A member of the ambulance crew said that a woman received too much anesthesia, experienced convulsions, stopped breathing, and went into cardiac arrest. An officer was heard to say, 'This kind of thing happens all the time.'

"Subsequent phone calls to the D.C. Rescue Squad produced no admissions that anything noteworthy happened at the Hillcrest abortion clinic on August 14. A phone call to the clinic elicited an abrupt, 'No information is being given out on this.'

LeVay's "Bible" teaches unrestrained pursuit of sexual pleasure. Where are the FBI investigations into a connection between the Satanists and NOW, NARAL, NEA, NAMBLA, the Clintons, etc.? We see a conspiracy. How about some RICO action here. Or just a little publicity on the connection between the Devil and these sexual libertines would be fine.

■ ELCA and other Apostates

As mentioned in the previous issue, your editors departed from a local Lutheran church in 1984, because it was moving further along the road of apostasy through its merger with two other apostate associations to form what is now the third largest protestant denomination, the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. (Number one and two spots are held by the Southern Baptist Convention and the apostate United Methodists.)

That ELCA joined with five other anti-Christian "Christian" groups at a news conference on March 17, 1993 endorsing the march for homosexual rights in D.C. on March created by the Creator in His own image. And the destruction of the least of these innocent ones brings grave consequences upon nations.

■ MS. Magazine "Anti-Choice Terrorism" (May/June, 1993) — Judith Warner warns her readers with graphs—"Clinics in Peril"—showing increased use of force against abortuaries in recent years:

It's an effective strategy. According to the Alan Guttmacher Institute, abortion services are now unavailable in 83 percent of U.S. counties. It probably won't get better: many doctors who started performing abortions after Roe are now reaching retirement age, fewer medical schools teach abortion techniques, and more doctors are unwilling to take the personal risks.

Naturally these humanitarian doctors who sacrificially serve the interests of women have an interest in their own well-being. The pay for sacrificing, however, just isn't high enough when friends and relatives of the sacrifice decide to protect him.

■ Missoula, Montana update — (AP) "The March 29 [1993] firebomb that destroyed Blue Mountain Clinic's leased offices also destroyed the clinic's ability to rent space in Missoula, says Director Gwenyth Mapes..."

"The early-morning firebombing caused some potential landlords to refuse the clinic as tenants out of fear of harassment or vandalism, Mapes said. Other landlords objected on ideological grounds to the clinic's 670 abortions in 1992, she said.

"If the experience of other burned-out clinics around the nation is a guide, Blue Mountain could also face problems with insurance, as well, Mapes said."

The AP report goes on to say that the local police files were turned over to the Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms, those fine folks who produced the Waco inferno.

■ Springfield, Missouri update — We reported on the December 28, 1991 shooting at a Springfield abortuary in which two people were seriously wounded. "Police declined to identify the victims, therefore we don't know whether or not they were innocent" (CACN, June, 1992).

Recently the Dallas Morning News provided an update (January 30, 1994). The abortuary has remained closed to this day. Only one remains in Springfield and citizens are resisting the re-establishment of a second.

7,000 citizens signed a petition in opposition to a new abortuary. A small group of false teachers and apostates of the Religious Coalition of Abortion Rights have spoken in support. A local United Methodist pastor along with a Presbyterian has weighed in with two heathen pastors and a rabbi.

The injured from the 1991 shooting included the abortuary building owner, Don Catron, and abortion accomplice, Claudia Gilmore. Apparently there was plenty for citizens or relatives to be perturbed about. Both of the town's abortionists had accidentally killed women while helping them destroy their preborn children. National attention was given to Springfield when a 17-year-old died after Abortionist Robert Crist killed her child in 1991. In 1988 Abortionist Scott Barrett Jr. accidentally killed 23-year-old Stacy Ruckman and lost a $23 million wrongful death lawsuit to her family.

■ Donahue and Posner — Paul Hill presented himself before the grand moral inquisitors on March 13. Vladimir Posner, the former communist "newsman" (read: disinformation specialist) is an appropriate comrade for Phil the shill. Phil, like many elitist America pagans, fancies himself to be an open-minded, tolerant sort. But he has little tolerance for Christians who are not open-minded about the things he is close-minded about. (He loves "abortion rights" and is close-minded to the truth that human babies are human beings before they exist the womb.)

The duo were struck nearly dumb when Paul candidly and with a calm smile on his face affirmed the legitimacy of defensive forceful action (in behalf of the threatened preborn child). Vladimir waxed into some kind of new age biological lecture on the inhuman development of the human em-

It is any wonder, then, why someone who comes along speaking the truth to this generation sounds so strange? So fanatical? The ears of most pew-sitters have been filled with liberal dribble for years.

■ Bobbitt and Abortion

Lorena Bobbitt had an abortion. Who really knows the heart and what impact sin has upon the soul? Lorena Bobbitt's media agent, Alan Hauge, said:

The original decision for Lorena to become pregnant was Lorena's alone. But when he (John) heard about it, he became incensed and angry, and basically threatened her that if she did remain pregnant, he would leave her and she would have to raise the child alone. (Washington Times, September 24, 1993)

In an exclusive interview with ABC news magazine "20/20," Mrs. Bobbitt claimed that she ended the pregnancy because her husband said she'd make a bad mother.

If this is true, the feminists who love Lorena and hate John are correct! John Bobbitt was a rotten abuser who got what he deserved.

We would support NOW, NARAL, etc. in a call for legislation to castrate men who force their wives to get abortions. Let us begin to understand each other and stand together on whatever common ground we can scrape up.

■ Chastity Pledge

It is not expected to catch on too quickly with NOW, NARAL, NAMBLA, or the National Council of Churches, but the pledge is spreading rapidly among church denominations which uphold orthodox, historical Christian morality. Tens of thousands of youths have signed pledge cards entitled, "True Love Waits":

Believing that true love waits, I make a commitment to God, myself, my family, those I date, my future mate, and my future children to be sexually pure until the day I enter a covenant marriage relationship.

The campaign began a year ago in April as part of a Southern Baptist Convention sex-education program. The first distribution took place at Tulip Baptist Church in Nashville. The program is spreading to other denominations including the Assemblies of God and Christian campus groups like Campus Crusade for Christ and Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Good news for Christians who take issue with the view that children are animals with no ability or responsibility to control their libidos.

■ NARAL Kate

The truth narrowly escaped the mouth of Kate Michelman. (We lie not!) Kate verily said:

"We think abortion is a bad thing. No woman wants to have an abortion."

It really did slip out. For it is against her nature to speak the truth about women and abortion. NARAL issued a press release saying, "Michelman has never said — and would never say " that 'abortion is a bad thing.'" Heaven forbid.

And Michelman herself vigorously denied having spoken such NARAL-anathematized utterances. Michelman told the Washington Post she would "never, never, never, never, never mean to say such a thing."

Ah, but as columnist Mona Charen observed, "That's five nevers, but they don't trump a tape. Her words are recorded forever on tape by a Philadelphia Inquirer reporter." Sorry Kate. Have sympathy now for that nasty old Richard Nixon.

We are grateful for Providence. Did God not use Balaam's ass to speak the truth? May he use Kate Michelman again in the future.

March for Life in D.C. Pastor's group from North Carolina. Too few. The sheep were there. Where were the shepherds?

■ Those 17,000 Fetuses

It must have been about 12 years ago when the 17,000 late term products of abortion were discovered in a large shipping container in L.A. The abortionist had neglected to have the babies disposed of and the weight of the bin was such that officials couldn't move it. The bin was in Woodland Hills, CA and the babies had been aborted at Inglewood Hospital. James Dobson reported thoroughly on the event and even the national press paid a little attention. A brochure, "American Holocaust," with pictures was produced and distributed by Center for Documentation of the American Holocaust, POB 99, Palm Springs, CA 92263.

The abortionist was Gordon Goei. He is still alive and back in the news. Goei operates the Clinica Medica para La Mujer International, in the 6900 block of Van Nuys Boulevard according to the LA Times. The abortionist is seeking restraining orders against protesters. According to the Times, "On Nov. 3, after the clinic had received a bomb threat earlier in the day, a protester broke a clinic window, poured in acid, and set the building afire... Goei seeks a court order forcing the protesters to stop confronting clients and passersby outside the clinic or being within 60 feet of clinic property."

Now, it seems to us that there are some Christians who feel led by God to speak against child-slaughter outside the abortuaries. And there are other Christians who feel led to burn them down. We just don't understand the wisdom of the abortionist. If he would just go to church once or twice and hear folks give testimonies about the Lord opening and closing doors, he might be able to make things easier for himself! He would gain some knowledge of the way many Christians discover the will of God: the door method. It's easy to understand. When the Lord closes one door, He often opens another. So, if the door of public protest is closed, maybe another door will open. Lo and behold, he might discern a new ministry. He might pick up a scourge and truly protect the innocent.

Anyway, it would be in the abortionist's interest to visit a church now and then, just to get some understanding of the way his opponents think.

Square Baptist Church in San Francisco on September 19, 1993. Queers held a rowdy and disruptive protest outside the building where they beat on the doors and assaulted citizens in attendance.

On November 8, the church held a protest accusing the city Board of Supervisors of submitting to a "reign of threat, intimidation and terror coming out of the homosexual-lesbian community." Counter-protests resulted in the arrest of three queers, two on charges of spitting on Christians. According to the Washington Times, the chanting activist deviants were adorned in "Mohawks and lip rings and purple Speedos and sometimes little else" (November 11, 1993).

Sodomy apologete Peggy Sue a member of Fighting Intolerance, Scapegoating and Hatred, complained that queers had come to San Francisco "to escape the hostility, bigotry and even physical harm perpetrated on us by our families, our neighbors and the churches in which we were raised. Now we find that those same intolerant bigots we once fled have followed us here to our own sanctuary, to San Francisco.

The Mission San Francisco de Assisi was established in 1776 by the Franciscans. The Franciscans were not sodomites, nor were they establishing a sanctuary for the same.

Nevertheless, trends today do suggest that some folks are in need of a sanctuary. It is not sodomites, however; it is Christians. Sodomites find sanctuary in almost every city in the nation. Godless judges and/or city councils kowtowing to trendy jurisprudential innovations concerning the nature of "civil rights" have bestowed legitimacy upon sodomy in violation of the very statutes on the state law books! But Christians do not have one city where they can live under Christian (just) Law. They have no city where blasphemy, abortion, sodomy, pedophilia, and adultery are held to be crimes. Absent of such cities, which were formally the norm throughout the land, where is their sanctuary?

Russia's worst serial killer was executed in February. 57-year-old Andrei Chikatilo was executed Russian style in Novochoerkassk — a shot in the back of the head. The judge and two-person jury ruled that Chikatilo murdered 21 boys, 14 girls, and 17 women over a 12-year period.

Ah, what's the big deal. A good abortionist does that in a couple days. Where is a decent prosecutor, judge and jury?

■ Janet Waco Reno

Paul Craig Roberts of the Cato Institute, syndicated columnist, and a former assistant secretary of the U.S. Treasury wonders who holds the feds accountable. The feds prosecute local police for using "excessive force" as they did the LA policemen re: Rodney King. But the recent abuses in the Randy Weaver case in Idaho, "where federal agents gunned down his wife and 14-year-old son in cold blood" and the Waco debacle are causes for alarm.

Roberts candidly asks, "How do we get the federal government to indict itself when it transgresses? In the least, the ATF and FBI are guilty of manslaughter in the Waco case. If no case is brought against the government, the result will be public cynicism over the divergent standards the federals apply to Los Angeles policemen and themselves."

Finally, a word about higher laws: "Waco happened because federal agents don't expect to be held accountable. There is no higher authority looking over their shoulders."

We agree with Roberts' concerns. But what shall that higher authority be? He suggests a "permanent special prosecutor." Sounds good, but what would be his higher authority. We need the Law of God as our higher authority under which the lower echelons of human authority operate.

■ Compelling the Citizenry to Pay For Childslaughter

How long shall the people continue to sustain such a government? The Clintonistas want not only to extend "abortion rights," but to make conscientious objectors pay for abortions. One would think the old draft dodger would have some sympathy for COs.

There were some flickers of hope in response to Clinton's December announcement to require states to spend Medicaid money on abortions for women (on grounds of rape or incest). Utah and Louisiana say they cannot obey the Clinton decree. South Dakota, Arkansas, Virginia, Missouri, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island were undecided. They were given until March to comply. (Tolerance? Liberty?)

Most lively response came from Pennsylvania Governor Robert Casey. In a letter to Prurient Clinton, Casey said, "This I cannot and will not do... I have no intention of following it."

Hmmm. Now if only the Prurient would refuse to grant the state its medicaid money (derived in part from the federal taxes levied upon the citizens of Pennsylvania).

Then, the Governor's move would be to deny the feds the authority to tax Pennsylvania citizens. That would make great political theater.

Another sign of health in the east is the rise of George Allen to the Virginia presidency. In his inauguration speech in January he said:

Like Patrick Henry, I have a healthy distrust of our overburdensome federal government. Whenever the rights and prerogatives of Virginia are threatened by Washington, I will stand up to fight the beast of tyranny and oppression that our federal government has become.

May he be true to his words.

■ More Judicial Schizophrenia

On Monday, February 28, a man was charged with the involuntary manslaughter of two people in Manassas following a traffic accident. One victim was Lavetta Brown, 31. The other girl had no name. She was still in the womb of Tasha Terry, 17.

Odd how those wanted babies are transformed into people by no virtue of their own! Just the status of "wantedness" makes them human!

■ Good Films

Thankfully, there are good films to be had. We list a few suggestions: Becket, Lilies of the Field, Mother Theresa, The Fourth Wise Man, The Scarlet and the Black, The Shoes of the Fisherman. Buy these and others from Catholic Treasures, POB 5034, Monrovia, CA 91017-1734.

■ Unholy Funerals

This past fall Andrew Cabot and others picketed the funeral of Tip O'Neil in Boston. Appropriate? We think so. Why should a Christian burial be given to an enemy of Christ? Just as the church has the duty to excommunicate unrepentant sinners, so it has the duty to decline to pronounce benedictions, much less eulogies over the graves of evildoers. Let their godless comrades speak to the air on their behalf. Such is the vanity of a life lived as a despicable insult to God.

Similarly, on Wednesday, March 9, the second prolife picket of a funeral took place in Houston. Rescue America's newsline reports that Abortionist John R. Coleman was being buried honorably by his Wheeler Avenue Baptist Church. In attendance were the mayor and entire city council. Only the day before his own death, Coleman had slaughtered 18 babies at the West Loop abortuary.

The newsline reports that prolife activists set up white crosses and a large poster-size photos of aborted babies outside the Church to remind members of the murderous trade of their fellow church member. Rescue America's Don Treshman spoke to a deacon and likened the funeral service to some Lutheran church in 1945 Berlin which might remove the burnt remains of Hitler and conduct a burial service for him. (Rescue America's National Newsline is 713-935-8696.)

■ Free Speech

Michael Ross wrote 62 letters to his local Missoula, Montana abortionist telling her the truth about her practice of babykilling and warning her with the Scriptures about appropriate justice. The one who tears the legs and arms off others ought to have his legs and arms torn off.

Abortionist Susan Wickland was fearful in the wake of the termination of Abortionist David Gunn in Pensacola.

Ross was convicted on some kind of intimidation felony and sentenced to ten years. (Life Advocate, February, 1994)

Ronald Max Waters of Sacramento was sentenced on January 5 to six months in prison followed by ten months in a residential rehabilitation center and ordered to stay away from the local abortuary and the abortionist for three years. His crime, according to federal judge William Shubb, was threatening Abortionist Bruce Steir through the mail. Waters warned Steir that the biblical penalty for murderer was stoning. He also wrote: "Dear Dr. Bruce, Good Bye."

Watch out for that gospel preaching. In due time, warnings even of divine punishment in Hell might be considered an assault upon someone's mental health. We look forward to the response of the gospel preachers who shun "civil disobedience" except where "preaching" is forbidden. ■
