Report From Pensacola II

There were a few at the federal and state trials who came to give the defendant honor. Regina Dinwiddie's mother arrived with a shirt adorned with the words "Friends of Paul Hill," enraging a co-passenger who denounced her as an outsider coming in to disturb the peace of the decent folk of Pensacola.

Christians at the trials of a second abortionist slayer missed the gracious and vivacious personality of Paul Hill. He was present as a defendant, rather than a defender. I missed him on the street, boldly carrying his signs in proclamation of the truth. And I missed the hospitality of his home with those smiling kids and that holy wife and hostess, Karen. If "prolife" critics of Michael Griffin successfully fixed attention upon his personal flaws to excuse themselves from examining the real issues, they were hard-pressed to do the same with Paul. Here was a blameless one. Here is a seminary-educated husband of sixteen years; father of Justin, Gloria, and Joy; prolife activist for twelve years. Here is a man of integrity. No one who knows him denies this.

Reporters, pundits, and "prolife" leaders tried, nevertheless. Scrounging like vultures in search of something rotten, one reporter found some inane anecdote from Paul's youth. Several noted that at age seventeen Paul had done some drugs (but not enough to earn a Cabinet position in the present regime). Connie Chung, in the fashion of a good KGB operative, zeroed in on the sanity factor. Ah yes, if you can't handle the arguments of your opponent, attack his person -- the classic Ad Hominem fallacy we learn in Logic 101. But this is not just a cheap debate tactic. It bodes something more nefarious. Yes, it reminds us of the "insane" label given to dissidents and resisters in atheistic, totalitarian regimes.

More disgusting is the Judas-like report in a Christian publication known as World magazine (10 Dec.). Joe Maxwell interviewed Paul and focused entirely upon Chung's insanity theme, wondering how a man could care for his own children and do such a thing. Like an anus with no other purpose but to spread excrement, Maxwell spews forth his personal impressions of a man he observed momentarily at an abortuary blockade in Jackson in 1993. "His eyes were twitching; his face at times was contorted." (Great insights, Maxwell Smart. What other wonders can you share with us about procedures in psychological evaluations?)

We will not record the chorus of stupid comments as we did in the June '93 edition following Griffin's rescue. Like minnows fearful of an approaching maw, they have darted away, but remain together in united condemnation of a righteous man. Do they fear the authorities? Do they fear loss of constituencies?

They have ducked the truth as if it were a grenade. But Paul has hurled it into the public square. And so, they jump upon it, taking the hit in the stomach, to save bystanders from being struck by the piercing truth.

Fools. They would save themselves and others from Truth, whose embrace they think to be deadly. But this IS truth and it is not so easily quenched. Though men sacrifice their intellectual and spiritual credibility in the effort to smother it, it will prevail, leaving them behind, a mass of dead guides.

We cannot help but see the analogy between Paul Hill and John Brown; and between their calumniating contemporaries. In an address to the citizens of Concord, Massachusetts on 30 Oct., 1859, Henry David Thoreau said:

I read all the newspapers I could get within a week after this event, and I do not remember in them a single expression of sympathy for these men...Even the Liberator called it "a misguided, wild, and apparently insane effort."

So it is with the detractors of Paul Hill; they are everywhere to be found -- among the churchmen and pagans alike. But he is, as Thoreau said of Brown, a superior man. He did not value his bodily life in comparison with ideal things. He did not recognize unjust human laws, but resisted them as he was bid. For once we are lifted out of the trivialness and dust of politics into the region of truth and manhood...In that sense he was the most American of us all. He needed no babbling lawyer, making false issues, to defend him. He was more than a match for all the judges that American voters, or office-holders of whatever grade, can create. He could not have been tried by a jury of his peers, because his peers did not exist...and we become criminal by comparison. Do yourselves the honor to recognize him. He needs none of your respect.

It is a hard truth to proclaim in a day when we have become acclimated to childslaughter; in another time it would shock no one to say that it is right and good to slay a man who is in the business of killing babies -- even unwanted ones. But it must be done, if truth is not to be buried. And so here is it again, short and simple: The unborn ought to be defended with force if necessary, just as the born ought to be. It is simple, unless one opts to deny the full humanity of the child in the womb.

Paul Hill has acted honorably and sacrificially. He has willingly laid down his life for the sake of others. Let us do ourselves the honor to recognize him. He needs none of our respect. •

Capitol Area Reports...

■ Jack Humphries...

Was dragged before a federal grand jury in December. Jack had spent several weeks in jail in the summer following blockades of abortuaries in Virginia. We reported that he "is conspiring with other Christians to continue to speak the truth outside abortuaries" (CACN, Sept. 1994).

Down, boys! Don't get all excited. It is still legal to talk. We hope that Jack was not inconvenienced on our account. Perhaps the feds are over sensitive to the word "conspiracy." We said that Jack was conspiring with others "TO SPEAK"! My but this administration is intolerant! Not only may one not act upon the truth; one must not even speak it.

Mr. Humphries reports deceit and trickery on the part of investigators. When he observed the agents trying to trap or intimidate him by suggesting that he had lied to them in the course of several interviews, he determined not to talk to them any more.

The federal government has been dragging numerous people before grand juries over the past year. Most the staff of AFLM, Shelly Shannon, Marjorie Reed, and Don Treshman are among those interrogated.

In this most recent grand jury hearing, John Burt was called up from Florida to testify on 21 December. Questions were apparently intended to build a conspiracy case against your editor and anyone else who has been speaking in defense of the use of force to protect innocent children. Janet Nero is desperate to hand some scalps to her NOWists. We'll see how far she transgresses against the right of free speech. We understand her problem. Her love of abortion is based upon a lie. We continue to the speak the truth and her lie cannot survive. She must quench the truth. She must jail those who speak it. We speak it again: THE PREBORN ARE PEOPLE, CREATED IN THE IMAGE OF GOD. WE PROCLAIM THAT THEY, AS HUMAN BEINGS, ARE WORTHY OF THE SAME PROTECTION THAT ALL OTHERS DESERVE. THEREFORE, THOSE WHO DEFEND THEM WITH FORCE CANNOT BE CONDEMNED.

And, we might add, LONG LIVE PAUL HILL!

■ Norfolk

The perseverance of Christians has been rewarded with Abortionist Michael Gertelschmid quitting. David Crane reports in his Front Line News that the official quitting date was 8 Sept. He enjoyed sky-dives and deep-sea dives, but did not want to have someone else make him take a dive. "I would rather die jumping out of a plane than have somebody kill me," said the ex-abortionist. (See Life Advocate, Nov., 1994).

To keep up with the fine work of Crane's Life Ministries, write and send your support to P.O. Box 9869, Norfolk, VA 23505.

■ ACLA

The American Coalition of Life Activists is the resurrected and revised Operation Rescue. It is a coalition of activist groups with regional leaders around the country. The Southeast Region, which includes Maryland, is headed by Dave Crane, leader of Citizens for Justice. He can be reached at (804)587-8678 or 300 Gunn St., Norfolk, VA 23505.

We commend the establishment of ACLA as an important national activist association. We believe that local public witness is most important for the success of the movement. But locals have the same United States government to contend with. A national association can provide support and encouragement to the locals.

The ACLA and Rescue America's Don Treshman have refused to condemn the use of godly force in defense of the innocent. This is important for purposes of maintaining a clear witness for the true humanity of the child in the womb.

■ ACLU v. Truth and Tradition

Its onslaught against the Christian base for law in the land has focused recently upon a plaque inscribed with the Ten Commandments which has been hanging in Montgomery County, MD court buildings for 54 years. ACLU Co-chairman David Coburn wrote that, "The Commandments have no place in the halls of our Courthouse, where members of the public have a particularly heightened expectation that their government will act on the basis of secular and not religious principles."

Secular principles? What are those? "Covet thy neighbor's wife if it feeleth good"? "Murder the fruit of thy girlfriend's womb if it inconvenienceth thee"? "Enjoy sex with the animal of thy choice all the days of thy life"?

Retired Circuit Judge James A. McAuliffe said, "I don't know whether it has any bearing on the issue of the Ten Commandments, but I have noted that on every coin minted in this country there is one statement of great import to this country and that appears in the words 'In God We Trust'" (Washington Times, 6 Aug., 1994).

■ Governor Allen

Despite all the love and support of homosexual behavior poured out by our major institutions, Virginia Governor Allen spoke to the contrary. On his monthly radio call-in he said that sodomy is "unnatural" and that "society ought not to condone homosexual relationships," according to the Washington Times. The Governor also noted that under Virginia law homosexual sex acts are illegal.

Time to evacuate Maryland and move to Virginia? Might depend upon whether or not Sauerbrey can supplant Glendenning following election fraud. •

A Little National News ...for the radical fringe

Come and get it, Fringies! Actually, this quarter we don't have a lot of food for you. It has been a lean fall. But we do have updates on the feds hunt for Christians who save babies by socially unacceptable means.

■ 'Borts Abandoning Pensacola

Pensacola is increasingly deemed to be a place inhospitable to 'borts.

"I'm just tired of living my life in fear," said Chicky Desmarais. She is the co-president of the Escambia County chapter of NOW. She and the NOWist treasurer, Sherry Langlais both plan to relocate to the Tampa Bay area (Washington Times, 30 Oct., 1994).

It wasn't reported whether or not they are typical NOWist lesbians. So it is uncertain whether the death threats and tire puncturing, which they allege to have experienced, were products of anti-abortion sentiments or simple homonausea. Pastors have speculated that it might just be a bad case of unholy paranoia as described in the Proverbs: "The wicked flee when no one is pursuing" (28:1).

■ Conspiracy Update

Surely the great conspirator is the author of A Time to Kill. No. Not your editor. Surely it is John Grisham! - the author of a more subtle book by the same title. He is a Southern Baptist who teaches Sunday school in the lovely city of Charlottesville, Virginia. Of course as a devout Christian he despises baby killing, even as his denomination declares.

In his The Pelican Brief (1992), Grisham sets forth his subliminal messages. Are they yet undetected by the Tank Lady, or only recognizable to those discerning conspirators who have eyes? In the opening pages of the book written prior to Michael Griffin's rescue in Pensacola, Grisham says: "Violence had become common. Abortion clinics had been bombed. Doctors had been attacked and beaten. One was killed in Pensacola, gagged and bound into the fetal position and burned with acid."

Why the dummy would want to be so obvious, we don't know. It looks like they are closing in on him. Oh, well. He deserves whatever is coming for writing his opinions right out in the open! Alas, the feds are closing in.

A federal grand jury convened in Virginia in continuation of Janet Nero's hunt for baby-loving Christians to prosecute. Jack Humphries was interrogated for a few days by the Justice Department. Inquisitors regularly mentioned your editor's name along with that of David Crane and Donna Bray. Indications are that the federal agents are using the usual tactics of intimidation and discord-sowing to spread fear distrust among activists -- all for the purpose of exacting information leading to persecutions (pardon us -- prosecutions).

John Burt was questioned for several hours on 21 Dec. They wanted to know the whereabouts of Karen Hill and Daniel Ware. (Ware was the fellow acquitted of weapons charges by a jury in Pensacola about a year ago. Mr. Ware had carried guns on a bus to Pensacola allegedly to protect John Burt from what he feared would be a Waco-like attack. Burt thought Ware to be misguided and called the authorities. While Ware was in jail for a couple months, no one visited him except for St. Paul Hill. And it was Paul and Karen who didn't worry about their reputations, but showed Daniel Ware hospitality when he was released. After a few days, he, vagabond-like, made plans to go back to Texas. It is natural to shun someone whose bizarre behavior might cause embarrassment; not so with Paul Hill, who prefers to obey the Master - Heb. 13:3). They were particularly interested in knowing someone to whom Mr. Burt had passed copies of a book called The Army of God five years ago.

Mr. Burt replied that he couldn't remember what he had for breakfast the day before, at which point the inquisitor called Mr. Burt a "liar." Mr. Burt then excused himself from the presence of such boorish behavior.

On 22 Dec. Mr. Burt went before the jury and was questioned, among other things, about his relationship with one John Witte from Houston and "the Brays." He was ordered to turn over all copies of The Army of God and all correspondence from Witte and the Brays.

The book of interest was one of many items, including Shelly Shannon's diary, dug up by federal agents in her back yard soon after her arrest. Allegedly Mrs. Shannon wrote fondly of other escapades of deliverance besides the one for which she is famous, viz, the wounding of "Tiller the Killer" in Wichita. She is now being prosecuted under myriad federal statutes for numerous life-saving deeds at locations all around the country.

We recently obtained a copy of the book; it is quite intriguing. It reads in some places like a comic book, but includes what appears to be authentic guidance in chemistry and pyrotechnic devices. References are made to other literary sources for more information on techniques for inducing rapid combustion. For example, the book lists Paladin Press, P.O. Box 1307, Boulder, CO 80306 (303) 443-7250; Loompanics Unlimited, P.O. Box 1197, Port Townsend, WA 98368; Minuteman Publications, P.O. Box 595, Hurst, TX 76053; Butokukai, P.O. Box 430, Cornville, AZ 86325 (602) 634-6280. We have not checked out the legitimacy of these addresses. They may be fictional, appearing as a matter of author style. But the impression we have is that these are "how-to" books readily available in a society with freedom of the press.

■ Book Review: When it Hurts We Can Help . . . The Army of God, Anonymous)

"Introductory Notes" includes an apparently serious exhortation: "The editors of this manual hope and pray that the information contained herein will be useful to those who are committed to pro-life activism. . . Let those who would argue and attempt to persuade continue to do so, and may God bless their efforts, just as in any war the diplomats seek their solutions by words and persuasion, while in the trenches the stink of death rises to heaven with the cry of the blood of the innocent victims who perish while words are exchanged."

Of course it is hard to talk about baby-killing in other than serious tones. And yet the author is able to keep the reader from being weighted down with the heaviness of the subject. He imbues his work with jocularly as he takes the reader through the various methods of "clinic" sabotage. The major chapter is titled, "99 Covert Ways to Stop Abortion" and the authors are listed as "Margaret Sanger and Faye Wattleton." Subtitles include, "The Glory of Glue," "The Spray Can Is Mightier Than the Sword," and "Tar Babies for Life." There are appendices on alarms and explosives. Finally, an interview of the Army of God is conducted by the Mad Gluer.

There is plenty of satire in The Army of God. And, as with any excellent writer, we are sometimes uncertain with this one when he has his tongue in cheek and when he talking candidly. Does he really think that a thousand thumbs is all it would take to stop the holocaust? (It would certainly handicap the "providers.")

We can't help but think it a merciful way to save babies as well as the souls and bodies of abortionists. Better to go to heaven missing a thumb than to hell with a whole body. (Oh the Word of God! Who said it was outdated?!)

Let our adulation of this book be expressed as follows: If it is as good as it appears from a cursory reading, we may decide to publish it for your pleasure, after reading it thoroughly. The book's anonymity makes it all the more attractive to the publisher, who likes to cut the cost of royalties. By the grace of God we shall publish it so that you can read The Army of God by next Christmas. Fun for the whole family.

■ Shelly Shannon

remains steadfast in prison. She is occasionally dragged out of her noisy environment for interrogations. In October guards "shook down" her cell and took several possessions, the most cherished of which were her address book, photographs of various demolished abortuaries, and a copy of CACN. Now that is downright mean.

■ Karen Hill (The First Lady of the Prolife Movement)

This woman is one of the most godly people I have met. Karen has supported her husband as a true helpmate throughout their sixteen and one-half years of marriage. Of all things, being cut off from telephone communication from Paul struck her quite hard. It was unexpected, and conversation with him is so precious. The death row prison in Starke permits no phone calls.

A fax from Karen on 8 December reads in part, "I just found out we can never have telephone contact with Paul unless it is a life or death family emergency . . . I had no idea this was coming. I felt like I had been struck with a dagger when we could not talk. . ."

She wrote Judge Bell a five-page handwritten letter dated 22 November. It reads in part:

. . . For 19 years Paul has been my best friend. The last few months have brought many difficult changes into our lives, but we continue to love each other with a deep and abiding love. For all of our married life (except the last 3 years) I have been a seminary student's wife or a pastor's wife. I find it quite difficult to change roles and write you regarding whether Paul lives or dies.

My husband has been involved in prolife work for 12 years. He began his prolife work while in seminary in Mississippi and continued during his pastorates in South Carolina and West Palm Beach. After he started his business in Pensacola he had the flexibility to devote more time to this.

Judge Bell, I am not a very controversial person. I was raised in the heart of the South and taught not to bring up controversial things. So much of this abortion battle is repulsive to me. However, I have had to make decisions regarding abortion on what I know to be right - not what is comfortable to me. I have stood outside the Ladies Center in Pensacola many Friday mornings hoping to persuade a young mother not to go through with the abortion. Quite honestly 1 hour seems like 4 when you are standing out there. People I have never seen before make obscene gestures at me and the National Organization for Women escorts photograph me again and again, etc. We have received threats and numerous harassing calls due to our protests.

Judge Bell, when you are trying to stop abortion you do not see abortion as an "issue." When you stand outside the abortion clinic and watch these ladies walk by you know that in their womb is a perfectly healthy preborn baby. When they walk back out, their very own baby is dead.

We have seen mothers change their mind before getting an abortion. We have seen pictures of babies born whose mothers changed their mind outside an abortion clinic. We have grieved with parents as they told of the agony they have been through after getting an abortion. . .

It is going to take many brave men, women, judges, pastors, policemen, congressmen, etc. who are willing to risk a great deal to change the laws in our land . . . I think people will one day look back on this period of history as a sad time indeed . . . a period when people pursued the good life instead of protecting the lives of

We continue to declare the Law of God as right and good for all. If it is good to pursue justice, we must pursue the Law of God. That Law teaches that innocent human life may not be taken and that the just penalty for those who transgress and murder the innocent is death. Righteous authorities will prosecute abortionists and execute them. This is the justice we declare and advocate.

Judge Bell, contrary to media accounts, Paul does not want to be executed. I think Paul would adjust to a life sentence better than most. He is a very emotionally stable man. Paul does think, however, that more good might come about as a result of his execution. He feels that the logical conclusion of legalizing the killing of the unborn is to kill a man convicted of trying to save them. Paul feels that the sooner the legalized killing of the unborn comes to its logical conclusion, the sooner it will be outlawed.

As Paul's wife I in no way want him executed. He has been a wonderful husband and friend to me. I have always considered Paul to be an unusually good father and the children adore him. I do strongly feel that it would be morally wrong for you to decide he should be executed. Paul and I firmly believe in the State's right to execute persons. However, you have a man before you that laid down his life for his unborn neighbors.

I will close. I am painfully aware that there are no words I can write that will sway you one way or the other. So my children and I pray to our great God that He will turn your heart to give Paul life. But, if you do not, God will give us the grace to bear our loss and use Paul's execution for good in the history of our country.

Thank you for taking the time to read my letter.

■ Marjorie Reed

Jailed since Oct., 1990 in connection with torching abortuaries in Ohio and New Jersey, Mrs. Reed had been 16 months on the lam before finally being wearhoused in federal prison. (She expects to be released in July of 1998 racking up a total of nine years on a twelve-year sentence.) In apparent consequence the prosecuting Magistrate James Carr almost lost his job. Eventually, as the Peters Principle dictates, he rose to higher public service. Of particular interest is Carr's replacement, Vernice Armstrong.

Now, the fact that Vernice is a lady is not upsetting. (Your editor has a female wife and six female daughters. And the beloved Shelly Shannon and Marjorie Reed are ladies. We, both editors, like ladies and have been conjugally happy - with our wives, each with his own, exclusively - for two decades.) It is the fact that Vernice is married to Abortionist Carl Armstrong which causes us a bit of irritation. Abortionist Armstrong has been killing babies since 1972 and has been operating out of his Toledo abortuary since 1974.

Armstrong's abortuary is one of those which Marjorie was charged for the burning of. Before taking on her present job, the mistress worked as a federal assistant district attorney in the civil division. In that capacity she would have been a colleague of Kathryn Killiam, the federal prosecutor who handled Marjorie's cases.

Was justice compromised in the prosecution of Marjorie? Is there still prejudice in consideration of the parole opportunities? It seems like such a moot question after recently witnessing the travesty in Pensacola where a man was denied his defense, but we point out the corruption to you anyway.

■ Vancouver, British Columbia, 8 November

Abortionist Garson Romalis was shot in the leg by someone who had wielded an AK-47. (God had a reason for the Soviet Union after all.)

Response from some Canadians was somewhat snobbish. Dr. Schonfeld, president of the British Columbia Medical Association said, "I'm shocked, absolutely shocked . . . It's just so foreign to our way of life and our thinking" (Washington Times, 10 Nov., 1994).

No, in Canada they don't have as many social problems, perhaps. But neither did they have the blight of a racist slavery system, the effects of which sin are still felt in the United States. (No credit to you Canucks. If they could have grown cotton, your wicked ancestors would have done the same thing.)

In the wake of this event the Canadian Broadcasting Company (comparable to CNN) featured at least two interviews. Michael Bray was the unwanted ally of the Alliance for Life President opposite an abortionist from Toronto and 'bort sociologist Dallas Blanchard, author of a book about anti-abortion "violence." Mindless callers into the TV program gave your editor pause to reflect upon the comparatively revived condition of Americans! (You KNOW there is darkness in this world!)

A more interesting exchange occurred on a Canadian program which featured Roy McMillan of Jackson, MS and Regina Dinwiddie (of outburt-in-the-Paul-Hill-courtroom fame) of Kansas City. One of the 'borts on the program proceeded to dish out one inverity after another to the point that Roy was about to disgorge his breakfast right there on the set if he didn't say thing in reply. The guest 'bort said that in the wake of the shootings in the United States 1) abortions are up, and 2) more doctors are signing up to be abortionists.

Now, Roy is endowed with quite a bit of wit, and it was beneath his style just to up and call the woman a liar. So Roy exposed the woman's buffoonery. He said, "Well now, if you're increasing your supply of abortionist whenever one is shot dead, you ought to shoot them yourselves."

Regina is a feisty thing in her own right, but she may have been inspired by Roy when she chimed in and offered her counsel: "When you hire new ones, keep 'em fat and slow, so they'll be easy to shoot."

A few weeks after I heard this report, I was standing in the foyer of a huge avidly prolife Baptist church in my neighborhood. Pastor Dave has denounced me publicly from time to time for defending the use of godly force; however, since two of my kids were playing the piano in the sanctuary at a recital, I darkened the door. As I browsed through the literature organized in various boxes on the walls I saw a brochure produced by Focus on the Family with a picture of former abortionist Beverly McMillan. Beverly is married to Roy and has a successful ob/gyn practice. She was prepared to testify in Paul Hill's trial about her personal experiences, had he been given the opportunity to put on his defense. I didn't think it good to tell Pastor Dave about Dr. McMillan's opinions; didn't want to see those fine educational brochures purged from the hands of the parishioners.

■ John Brockhoeft

Is due for release in mid-February. How many total composite years does that make for the movement? Anderson, Grace, Spinks and Beseda have been in since the early eighties; Brockhoeft and Reed since the late eighties; the Florida bombers did about four a piece; a year or two for another dozen. Add to these all the days, weeks, and years for non-forceful interventions. Must be about three hundred years sacrificed in the face of how many years of human life lost in each abortion?

The movement has sacrificed about a half-dozen lives so far.

■ William Raspberry joins the radical fringe . . . for a moment

He took a lot of heat from "responsible" pundits when he presented an honest examination of the defensive action position. His column appearing in the Washington Post (14 Sept.) drew the appropriate analogy between defending the born and the unborn. He evaluates the recent Florida case of 19-year-old Kawana Ashley who shot herself in the stomach in a crude effort to administer an abortion. She was charged with murder. Raspberry dared to question those who could condemn this deed while condoning clinic-administered abortion.

It might have made more sense, in the actual case, to charge Ashley with practicing medicine without a license. But murder? For getting rid of a mass of cells that had somehow attached itself to her uterus? . . .

Is that absurd? Well, it depends. If you believe that fetuses aren't children and that abortion is no business of anyone whose womb is not directly involved, then of course it's absurd . . .

But suppose you believe - as millions of Americans do - that fetuses ARE children, and that clinical abortion is the deliberate taking of human life. Why, then, are so many of these millions so determined to distance themselves from Paul Hill, the minister charged with the July killing of an abortion clinic physician . . .?

We haven't heard a decent answer to that one yet.

■ John Salvi

Tough to call this one. He terminates accessories to murder, but he did not eliminate the principal. Why? Too much security in a climate where death camps are guarded by government agents, leaving him no option? More in the next issue. •

■ Vicki and Sammy Weaver

Still no justice. They were murdered in Idaho on their own property in 1992 by federal agents. Husband, Randy Weaver, survived the eleven-day assault which produced the death of only one federal assassin at the hands of Kevin Harris. Mr. Harris was acquitted of the absurd murder charges because he had acted in self-defense. But the real murderers are not going to be prosecuted. Despite the findings of a Justice Department investigation which recommended the criminal prosecution of federal officials, Janet (Waco) Reno is refusing to prosecute.

Deval Patrick, assistant attorney general for civil rights, is responding to media inquiries about the Justice Department's handling of this case. He refuses to release the report to the public or even to Idaho Sen. Larry Craig.

James Bovard, author of Lost Rights: The Destruction of American Liberty, writes in the Washington Times: "Mr. Patrick's whitewash of the Idaho killings echoes what Attorney General Janet Reno did after the Waco debacle" (15 December). Bovard goes on to exhort the newly empowered Republicans to take stock of themselves: "If the Republicans let the Justice Department and the FBI get away with what may have been murder, then they will be accomplices to the deceit and repression of the American people."

■ A Few Good Movies

The National Review lists its "100 Best Conservative Movies" (24 Oct.). Here are a few under the heading, "Best Pictures Celebrating Religion and Faith": A Man For All Seasons (1966), Chariots of Fire (1981), and Therese (France, 1986).

A few others from various categories include: Johnny Belinda (1948), On the Waterfront (1954), Tender Mercies (1983), My Left Foot (1989), Stand and Deliver (1988), Meet Me in St. Louis (1944).

■ Congressional Queers

Before the advent of the Clintonistas there were only two out-of-the-closet sodomists in Congress. The Honorables Barney Frank and Gerry Studds are both from the Land of Teddy and - to our knowledge - both are yet AIDS-free. (Where did Providence come up with the names of these gents? Our God is truly awesome!)

Comes out now another, but with a less poetically correct name. He is Rep. Steve Gunderson, but not from Massachusetts; he represents the good people of Wisconsin. He and his "companion" became "the first same-sex congressional couple to attend a formal dinner at the Clinton White House" a year ago (Washington Times, 19 Sept., 1994).

O 1996! Come quickly!

■ IT'S WORSE IN CANADA

Take heart! In Ontario taxpayers are footing the $778,000 bill incurred by three Toronto abortuaries for their expenses in going to court last year to ban anti-abortion picketing. Added to this cost is the millions paid the four or five government lawyers involved in the case. Yet more outrageous are the revelations which have emerged from abortuary records made public through recent court proceedings. In order to obtain injunctions banning prolife activity from 23 abortuaries across the province, abortionists had to talk about their money. Seven million is given them annually by the government in subsidy to cover costs of security measures, property improvement, and other operating expenses. (Hmm.

Maybe this is no consolation after all. Was Judah comforted in the fact that Israel was judged by the Almighty first?)

■ Joycelyn

Another nice name ruined. Do any parents name their child "Adolf" any more? Clinton's sex evangelist has lost her pulpit. But has her church excommunicated her yet?

■ On the Health of the "Movement"

How often have the prolife leaders and pundits whined about the "movement" being set back by the termination of abortionists? FACE was in progress before the termination of Gunn. The number of Congressman standing publicly in support of blockades could be counted on one hand. FACE would have passed with or without Gunn's divine appointment with death. The same whining has continued nonetheless following Paul Hill's hewing of the baby-killers.

We are not certain of what indicia such detractors use to evaluate progress. But if the election by the people of prolife politicians is a sign, what do these whiners say about the November repudiation of abortion? In all senate and congressional races where the prolife or pro-abort positions were on display, the prolife politician won.

We look forward to many letters of apology being sent to Paul Hill. The indicia can well be interpreted to say that Paul Hill's action aroused (even selfish) people to say, "I want this whole abortion thing to go away. I'm voting out the abortion rights enthusiasts who have brought this contention into the land and disturbed the peace."

■ Wake Up, Judie

Judie Brown salutes leftist Bishop Oscar H. Lipscomb, "who continues to refute the assertions of Fr. David Trosch," and even offers a copy of the Bishop's statements to her readers (Communique, 14 Oct., 1994).

We regret that Mrs. Brown has not offered her readers Fr. Trosch's rebuttal of Bishop Lipscomb's sorry excuse for a response Fr. Trosch's position. We don't have quite the mailing list of Mrs. Brown in order to balance out the national education process, but we are happy to offer Fr. Trosch's address for any of you fortunate subscribers who wish to read the exchange in full: P.O. Box 850307, Mobile, AL 36685-0307

■ 3% and 2.8%

We reported last quarter the August CNN poll which revealed that 3% of the population affirm the application of the doctrine of justifiable homicide to the case of the terminating abortionists. It is not a bad number, upwards of 7 million. Kind of calls to mind that 7,000 that were shown to Elijah at an hour of disappointment when he thought there was no one out there devoted to the truth.

Then, two months later, the University of Chicago released its prestigious sex report. The survey was conducted in a much more scholarly fashion than were the previously touted Kinsey, Masters and Johnson, and Janus reports. (Kinsey's work gave us the 10% number on the percentage of homosexuals, which most folks doubted, but which probably caused friends and neighbors to eye one another suspiciously.)

Well, the big news is that the number of male homosexuals turns out to be 2.8%. Folks around the land heaved a sigh of relief. Not as bad as it seemed.

Our special affection was set upon the juxtaposition of the two numbers. There are more supporters of Paul Hill out there than there are male homosexuals! And the numbers of the former are growing, while the numbers of the latter - due to Christian conversion, lack of reproduction, and AIDS - are dropping.

Take heart, brethren! There is light in the darkness!

■ Satan and the Feds

The Devil wants a voice in the public square and ought to get it, according to ACLU-type interpreters of our Constitution. And his "religious freedom" shall be honored, said U.S. District Judge Edward Nottingham: "We ought to give the devil his due." (Easy to say for a haughty neo-pagan judge who doesn't believe in the Devil.)

One of the several dozen Federal Correctional Institutes has an aggressive Satanist among its inmates. And he wants his religious freedom. Robert James Howard gets to perform satanic rituals by order of the federal court (Washington Times, 13 Oct., 1994)

The folly of this idea of "religious freedom" as the "American way" is not only propagated by Norman Lear's outfit. Unfortunately, the purportedly leading Christian advocacy groups like CWA and Gary Bauer's Family Research Council also argue for "religious freedom" so that Christians and pagans can pursue their agendas without one exercising dominion over the other. No, no, we good Christians wouldn't want to impose our God or his standards upon anyone.

■ Wise Sayings

Joseph Sobran offered a list of cultural observations recently. A few follow (Washington Times, 18 Oct., 1994):

* "Gridlock is the next best thing to having a Constitution."

* "The political establishment wouldn't mind the emergence of a third party, provided it was just like the other two."

* "How can you know your neighbor without knowing his religion?"

* "We live in a society that is permissive without being free."

* "Advocates of legal abortion say government has no business in the bedroom. I say we legalize cannibalism. Government has no business in the kitchen."

* "And have you ever noticed how liberals who want to 'keep government out of the bedroom' don't seem to mind it rifling every other room in the house?"

■ Kicked Out of the (United) Kingdom

Your editor received a letter from the Immigration and Nationality Department in Croydon, England dated 15 June. A Mr. G. MacAlister's signature appears at the bottom of the short note which says:

"I am directed by the Home Secretary to inform you that he has given directions that you should not be given entry to the United Kingdom on grounds that your presence here would not be conducive to the public good . . . you are not entitled to exercise the right of appeal . . . Should you attempt to travel to the United Kingdom you will therefore be refused entry."

It was curiously received. Your editor had made no requests or inquiries regarding travel abroad. Methinks the letter was inspired by frustrated pro-aborts ever searching for a way to exact some kind of condemnation or censure or rebuke from some kind of authority.

Anyway, the letter came to mind a few months later upon reading about the 14-year-old vandal in London who is terrorizing the town ("Thieving teenager torments townsfolk," Washington Times, 24 Nov., 1994). The Reuters news service reports from London, "Businesses hit by a one-boy crime wave that sent insurance costs soaring in an English town have appealed to the government to act against the delinquent destroying their livelihoods. The 14-year-old has been convicted 138 times for vandalism and theft in the northern town of Elland the past four years and is blamed for doubling the town's crime rate and driving out traders."

The Reuters report says, "The Home Office declined to comment yesterday."

Perhaps the Home Office had more important things to do. It had to worry about all the prolife "terrorists" out there threatening to invade England and disturb the neighborhoods.

■ Conspiracy Update

Janet Waco Reno continues her conspiracy campaign to root out and/or intimidate anti-abortion activists. In her never-ending pursuit of peace for murderesses, abortionists, and accomplices, she conspires to silence the opposition. (See Area Reports in this issue on Jack Humphries). Federal agents, of the ATF and FBI variety, have visited many anti-abortion activists in recent months. As advertised in the New York Times, they checked out the signatories of Paul Hill's "Defensive Action" statement. Investigation has not been limited to these good folks, however. It has even included several of those long-term prisoners (arson, bombing, conspiracies, etc.). Agents have attempted to intimidate them into saying something which might be used to convict others or add convictions to those already doing time.

On the other hand, some indicate a dislike of their assignment. What is a righteous agent to do? Shall he participate in an immoral pursuit after those fellow citizens who are trying to stop what he knows to be murder? Or shall he quit his nauseous job and purify himself of that miserable feeling one gets from doing something disgusting?

These are difficult times for the Christian federal agent. If he leaves his job, his replacement quite likely will not be an improvement. Why depart and allow the present regime to put a lesbian in one's place? The old lesser-of-two-evils dilemma. What is a godly fellow to do?

We have an idea. He can use the usual tricks of the trade to extract testimony, but for good use. He can do service of targeting the more flipped-out, Mahatma-like characters who are damaging the movement with their foolish denunciations of defensive action.

■ School Prayer

Now you should know that since Bill Clinton said on 15 Nov., "I have always supported voluntary prayer in schools," something is wrong with it. And there is, indeed.

Gingrich's effort sounds wholesome and so forth. But it misses the point. Who cares if every Hindu, Buddhist, OHMer, Premie, Aztec, Mormon or TMer is given the opportunity to pray? Christians have it already unless they happen to slip and utter the name of Jesus too loud. (The exception here is when that name is used as an expletive.) Accordingly Mormon Sen. Orrin Hatch says: "I would prefer to solve the economic problems first." Of course! Mormons are polytheists, (praying to who knows what) whose evolving religion changes with the times. Orrin doesn't want to get tangled up with foundational issues of identifying the true God!

The point is that the schools are in the mess not because students aren't allowed to pray to their various gods. Rather, they are debased by their failure to acknowledge publicly the true Lord Jesus. (That was the tradition of public schools of the past. They were distinctly Christian.)

We contend that both devout Catholics and Protestants would be happy to have schools simply acknowledge the Triune God publicly along with his Commandments and leave the personal prayers concerning Mary or other heroes of the Faith to the individual. Moreover, the fact that many non churchgoers send their children to Christian schools indicates that they like the fruit of Christianity even if they try to ignore the Root.

God is teaching the nation what is True and Good by giving it a taste of life apart from public acknowledgement of Him by the institutions. The issue cannot be ducked by substituting "values" for Christian ethics or prayer for public acknowledgment of His kingdom here in this land.

Let the local school boards contend for Christian prayers offered by the principal to start off the day. The True God and the true morality which He has legislated must be upheld. These are the "values" which everyone longs for but refuses to recognize. •
